A cuckoo never makes its own nest. It lays eggs in a crow's nest. Eagles lay eggs on cliffs and parrots live in the hollow of a tree.

Feather

The body of a bird is covered with many feathers. These feathers are of three kinds – flight feathers, down feathers and body feathers.

Flight feathers are usually found on the wings and the tail. They help in flying. Down feathers are fluffy and soft. They keep the bird's body warm. Down feathers are found in newborn birds.

Body feathers cover the bird's body. They give shape to the bird's body.

The feathers of birds are useful to human in many ways. The feathers are often used to decorate large hats and also used to stuff pillows, cushions and quilts.

Kinds of feather

A sparrow has about 3,000 feathers in summer but as many as 3,500 in winter to keep it warm.

A swan has more than 25,000 feathers.

Migration of Birds

The cranes found in Siberia are called Siberian cranes. During the winter season, it is very cold there. There is scarcity of food also. So, these birds travel a long distance to some warmer places like India. Not only the Siberian cranes but many other birds also travel from one place to another in search of food and to protect themselves from extreme weather conditions. This traveling of birds is called migration.

Siberian Crane

Birds use things like sticks, mud and feathers to make their nests.

Nests of Birds

12/5

Different birds build different kinds of nests, e.g. on trees (crow), river bank (kingfisher), holes in trunks (woodpecker), weaving and knitting (weaver bird). Before making a nest, birds choose their nest place with great care. They choose the place which is safe and out of reach of the enemies. Once birds select a proper place. They make a nest of that shape where the eggs and young ones will remain safe.
